THE BIRD CLOWN.

A Queer Kind of Fellow Is the Yellow Breasted Chat.

The oddities of the yellow breasted chat begin even with his classification. That of a warbler the size of a Baltimore Oriole, a warbler with a song like a mocking bird. Indeed, there is little about the chat that is not remarkable. He goes in for the weird and the spectacular. If Nature designed him to show what she could do in the way of the unusual and the eccentric, she had remarkable success.

This bird and not the catbird is the real "clown of the woods." Clown of the catbird, he prefers the shrub and lower trees. A wild tangle of briars and vines is a favorite haunt. It is only the better to survey such a retreat that he mounts to the top of a tree. From his lofty perch he sings to the amazement and bewilderment of the person that hears the song for the first time. More likely than not he will become invisible and silent upon the first attempt to approach him, remaining quiet and hidden till you move on again; then he chuckles loudly and scolds and spits and scolds till you are out of sight and hearing.

No bird is so fearful of being seen or such a master of hide and seek. It is worse than useless to try to steal a march on him. He manages to be always on the wrong side of the next bush. If you should find his nest, which is a pretty little basket of straw and weed stalks lined with fine grasses and strips of soft bark or leaves placed a foot or more above the ground among tall weeds or bushes, the sitting bird steals away and is at once lost to sight. Take a peep at the white, red speckled eggs and then hide among the bushes as far away from the nest as you can while still keeping it in sight. You may have to wait for an hour and even make other trips to the spot, but this is the surest way to get a good look at this shy one.—St. Nicholas.

Chinese Executions.

In Canton every two weeks there is a public execution of criminals in one of the market places.

Old Christmas.

When Gregory XIII. reformed the calendar in 1582 he omitted ten days, but when the new style was adopted in England in 1752 it was necessary to cut off eleven days, which brought Jan. 6 back to Dec. 25 of the previous year. So what we now call Jan. 6, in the old style, was Christmas day, or Dec. 25.

A HUMAN MACHINE.

He Was Able to Correct a Language He Did Not Understand.

When Max Muller was preparing his edition of the Illegveda he had, so the story goes, an illustration of the instinctive wisdom of the compositor.

In providing the manuscript for about 6,000 sheets of print the author naturally tripped from time to time.

Whenever he did trip, there on his proof was the error queried in a careful hand. Surely, he thought, some unknown scholar in the university must be overlooking his proofs with kindly interest and making the corrections for him. Inquiry showed that this was not the fact. The corrections were the corrections of the man who set up the type. "Did this man, then, know Sanskrit?" Muller asked. Not a bit of it. Use and wont enabled him to detect the errors as a hungry child detects a cooking dinner. The discovery originated through his arm rather than from any intellectual doubt, and that arm was palsied!

This printer had sustained an accident, leaving him with an arm partly paralyzed, and as this made him slow in his setting his masters turned him on to Sanskrit, with which he had no previous acquaintance. He had to learn upward of 800 types for the work, but he learned them and accustomed himself to the work. Now, many of the letters in Sanskrit cannot follow each other, or if they do, must be modified. In writing Muller sometimes forgot these modifications, but they were all marked on the proof.

Muller was so interested that he sought out the printer to ask him how he was able to correct a language which he did not understand. The explanation was remarkable: "You see, sir, my arm gets into a regular swing from one compartment of types to another, and there are movements that never occur. So if I suddenly have to take up types which entail a new movement I feel it and put a query." What a dog's life the "au spelling," or Arctemus Ward's, which is the same thing, would have caused that marvelous human machine!—St. James' Gazette.

Church and Clergy.

The general assembly of the Presbyterian church in Canada has elected as moderator Rev. F. B. Duval of Knox church, Winnipeg, formerly of Toledo, O., and Wilmington, Del.

Cardinal Gibbons and Archbishop Farley intend to assist at the eucharist congress in London next September, going afterward to Rome to visit the pope. It is expected that they will be present at the consistory which will be held at the close of the papal jubilee.

Rev. Dr. A. M. Campbell, for seven years pastor of the Wagoner Place United Presbyterian church of St. Louis, has resigned to accept the presidency of the Franklin Co-educational university at New Athens, O. Dr. Campbell has been a minister for twenty-five years and has held pastorates in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Missouri.

The Rev. Dr. William R. Jenney, who recently celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his rectorship of St. Paul's Episcopal church, Hoboken, N. J., prides himself on the fact that in the whole course of his ministry he has missed only one church service which he was scheduled to hold. A severe attack of grip, which confined him to his bed, was responsible for his one absence.

Base Hits.

The New York Americans have sold Outfielder Baerwald, alias Bell, to the Memphis Southern league club.

For the first time since he has been with the Cubs Artie Hoffman holds a regular position. Manager Chance announces that he will play Artie in right field permanently.

The chest protector introduced by Billy Sullivan of the Chicago Americans is being generally adopted by major league catchers. It is an upholstered affair that folds back over the shoulders and is fastened after the fashion of shoulder braces. It does away with the inconvenience of inflation, which was one of the drawbacks of the old pneumatic type. The new gear folds four ways and takes up no more space than the pneumatic kind.

A New One For Him.

"The climate here is salubrious, isn't it?" remarked the tourist.

"Say, friend," replied the native. "Just write that there word down fur me, will yer? I gitt tired o' swearin' at this climate in the same old way. That's a new one."—Philadelphia Press.
